Call for Nominations 2020

Biennial Australian Studies in China Book Prize

The Australian Studies in China Book Prizes are awarded biennially at the International Conference of Australian Studies in China organised by the Chinese Association for Australian Studies. Up to three prizes of AUD$2000 will be awarded for the best books published on Australian Studies topics in the two years since the last conference (that is, since June 2018). The three categories are as follows:

- one prize for an original work in Chinese;
- one prize for an original work in English;
- one prize for a translation (from English to Chinese).

The prizes are awarded to recognise and encourage the efforts of researchers, writers and translators working in the field of Australian Studies in China. They are restricted to Chinese citizens working in the Chinese university system or equivalent institutions in China. The judges may choose not to award a prize if no suitable books are submitted in a particular category.

The Selection Committee will consider original writings and translations on subjects relating to Australia, including Australian culture, arts, media, economy, politics, diplomacy, history, science, technology and innovation, agriculture, health, law, education, social sciences, and Australia-China relations. Individual or joint authors, translators, editors, publishers and Australian Studies Centres can make nominations for this prize on behalf of the author(s) or translator(s).

A nomination form is attached. Nomination forms and copies of the book (two copies if in print form or one digital version) should be sent to the Foundation for Australian Studies in China (FASIC) by Friday 15 May 2020:

Foundation for Australian Studies in China
Level 3, 151 Macquarie Street
Sydney NSW 2000
Australia
